URGES IDEALS FOR TEACHERS

MUST INSTILL CHARACTER-BUILDING PRINCIPLES.

SHOULD AID CHILDREN

For They Are Citizens Of Tomorrow Miss Mary McSkimmon, Head Of National Education Ass'n, Says.

Teaching ideals of character was recommended to teachers of Northwest Missouri at the general sessions this morning at the College by Miss Mary McSkimmon, president of the National Education Association. This is the first time a president of that association has ever addressed the Northwest Missouri teachers and her address proved to be very much to the point and her oratory was fervid and carried a strong appeal to the audience of her fellow teachers.

"It seems to me that the least the world can do today is to put every possible help in the way of the children of today who will have to face the issues we shall leave for them," she told them in her opening remarks.

Concerning the work of the educational psychologist Miss McSkimmon said in tribute: "We are indebted more than we can tell to that group of scientists who have taught us the laws of mental hygiene but we are much more indebted to that group of psychologists who taught us the laws for understanding little children."

The pre-school age was characterized by the president of the nation's teaching force as of great significance in the ultimate mental and nervous make-up of the adult citizen. "When we have more people in the country who understand the importance of this period of life we will have done much to empty our insane asylums and to lessen the stream passing through our divorce courts," she said. Many of the tragedies and accidents in adult life in the country are traceable to causes which began in the pre-school age in life.

Look to Teachers.

Most people, especially the cartoonist have not yet learned that children do not come to school with lagging footsteps, Miss McSkimmon told the teachers. She said that children first come to school gladly and trustfully and that it is only when the school fails to perform its work well that school becomes distasteful to the child.

"Ideals of character cannot be taught to children by giving them definitions of a list of virtues," Miss McSkimmon warned her audience. "We must teach them that life is just a great series of tests and that every time we fail in one of those tests, we lose something of ourselves unless we attack the next one with our renewed vigor. We must create for them those opportunities for doing things whereby real greatness of character may be born."

Should Teach Brotherhood.

Teaching the child the feeling of brotherhood with the others is of paramount importance according to Miss McSkimmon. If the public schools do their work well all of the feeling of snobbishness in the more fortunate class of children will be done away with, she believes.

The speaker asserted this morning that the child of today is more easily managed, more easily kindled to good spirits, better trained in the fundamental processes, and a hundred times more widely read than the children of the previous generation. No better tribute to the listening teachers could have been given.

RED CROSS TO BE OLD SANTA

SENDS CHRISTMAS BOXES TO CHILDREN ABROAD.

FINISH SEVENTY-FIVE

Seventy-five Christmas boxes, packed by Junior Red Cross members of Nodaway County, will be shipped Monday to New York to be later sent to children in foreign countries. Every year it is the custom of the Junior Red Cross to pack these boxes for children in other countries, who perhaps will not have a happy Christmas.

The boxes to be sent from here were packed by the junior groups from the Washington, Garfield, and Franklin schools in Maryville and by the schools of Quitman, Clearmont, Skidmore, and Conception. The last named is the Holy Family School.

The boxes contain an assortment chosen from the following: Rag or celluloid doll, hair ribbon, handkerchief, sewing outfit, bags, pencils, puzzles, rubber balls, small toys, marbles, tops, games, whistles, crayons, and mouth organs.

In many instances the toys, which fill the boxes were made in the different schoolrooms, and in more than one instance the money, which was spent on the boxes was earned by the children.

The boxes are of cardboard and are about the size of a brick. They are furnished by the national headquarters and bear the following, "A Merry Christmas from the American Junior Red Cross." There is also a place for the name of the school sending the box and it is also designated whether it is for a boy or a girl.

The boxes are sent to New York from here, and there they go to any of the following countries: Albania, Esthonia, Latavia, Lithuania, Belgium, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Roumania, Danzig, Switzerland, Austria, Hungary, Jugo-Slavia, Poland, Greece, Porto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Haiti.

There is one sister at the Holy Family School, who has been in this country but three years. While teaching in Austria before coming here, Junior Red Cross boxes came to her school. She told of the surprise shown when pencils in the boxes had erasers on them, as this is not the case in many of the foreign countries.

In speaking of the boxes, Mrs. Fern Crull, Junior Red Cross supervisor, said, "No single project financed through the National Children's Fund has been more far-reaching in its effects, both at home and abroad, than the sending of small gift boxes by the girls and boys of the American Junior Red Cross to be distributed at Christmas to the children of other lands."

Local Tourist Camp Becomes International Cross Roads for Large Number of Visitors

(By D. A. Caldwell, Secretary of Maryville Chamber of Commerce).

The 1925 tourist season is about at a close. During the eighty-five-day period between June 26 and September 21, at the Maryville tourist park, the Chamber of Commerce maintained night police protection and a register in which the name, home address, number in party, make of car and destination, of all those who used the park were recorded. Unfortunately, the vandalism of boys and girls who needs must always write their name where they should not be, destroyed part of this record. However, in spite of this needless waste, the register reveals some figures that are interesting and instructive, showing as they do what volume of tourist business can be expected through this city in future years when the road is paved all the way to Kansas City.

Three hundred parties of tourists contained eight hundred and seventy-one people, or practically an average of three persons per party, which is the universal average. They came from twenty-three states and one insular possession, in twenty-one different makes of cars, and were going to twenty-one states and two foreign countries.

The record of point of origin by number of parties is as follows: Missouri, seventy-nine; Iowa, seventy-five; Kansas, fifty-three; Illinois, fifteen; Oklahoma, thirteen; Nebraska and Minnesota, ten each; Colorado, and Texas, five each; Indiana, South Dakota, four each; California, three; Tennessee, two and Washington, North Dakota, Montana, Michigan, Florida, Pennsylvania, Wyoming, New Hampshire, and Hawaii, one each.

Less than half indicated their destination, but of the 132 parties that did the percentage rank was as follows: Iowa, 37 per cent; Missouri, 30 per cent; Minnesota, 11 per cent; Nebraska, 6 per cent; Oklahoma, 4 per cent; Illinois, California, South Dakota, and Washington, 2 per cent each; Colorado, Canada, Texas, and Arkansas, 1.5 per cent each; Mexico, New York, North Dakota, Tennessee, Ohio, Wisconsin, Pennsylvania and West Virginia, .7 per cent each.

Only 142 parties indicated the kinds of a car they were driving. On the percentage basis, Fords lead with 54 per cent (about the percentage in actual use compared with all other cars), with Dodge second, 8.5 per cent, and Buick third, 7.7 per cent. The others follow: Overland and Chevrolet, 4.2 per cent each; Studebaker, 2.8 per cent; Nash, Willys-Knight, and Hudson, 2.1 per cent each; Maxwell, Packard, Chrysler, Hupmobile, Marmon, and Cadillac, 1.4 per cent each; and Essex, Reo, Willys-6, Cleveland and Jewett, .7 per cent each.

Three boys on bicycles were enroute from Chicago to Mexico City.

PUBLIC ASKS ACCOUNTING

SCHOOLS MUST GIVE MONEY'S WORTH SAYS BRANDENBURG.

OPPOSES RESTRICTIONS

Colleges Should Educate More Rather Than Fewer, He Says—Conserve Faith.

"We must quit saying that we cannot measure education in terms of dollars and cents," W. A. Brandenburg, president of the Kansas State Teachers College at Pittsburg, told the teachers in the morning general session of the Northwest Missouri State Teachers Association in the State Teachers College auditorium.

The Kansas educational leader discussed some of the demands being made upon present day education, ending with the statement that there never has been a time in the history of the nation when we have put so much emphasis on education as at present.

Greatest Demands Given.

According to Mr. Brandenburg, one of the most insistent demands being made is that the teaching profession, through its administrative officers, give a strict account of the money spent for educational purposes.

Another demand, with which the speaker announced himself as being heartily in sympathy, is that more people rather than fewer be educated in our universities and colleges.

A third source of complaint against the educational system is that it adheres too rigidly to the standards set and makes no provisions for persons not having the advantages of elementary and high school education. Along this line the demand is that all education shall be along lines more purely adaptable to practical application of that education.

A steady call is coming to the schools also, Mr. Brandenburg says, to teach the students along lines that will conserve and strengthen their faith in the Christian principles as taught by the Great Teacher of Teachers. This instruction may be given without reference to any sectarian lines.

Educational Accounting.

"It has become necessary that we shall be willing to give a strict accounting of the great sums being used in education," the speaker told his hearers. "Large firms do not object to having their books audited and they also employ experts to tell them how to make their expenditures go farther. It it true that people are becoming more willing to be taxed heavily for school purposes but they are also coming to ask an accounting of how the money is spent. The time has come when we must put business in education.

"As long as legislatures feel that the money they appropriate for schools is going to be spent for the right kind of education, they are not going to be very stingy about making those appropriations."

Dr. Brandenburg said that there are some colleges which announce that they do not care for any further increase in enrollment but it was his opinion that those schools were "lying like dogs" and working for an increase in enrollment, using the statement as an alibi in case they do not succeed in getting an increase. Democracy in education, according to Mr. Brandenburg, consists in giving, insofar as possible, to every man and woman the keys to economic independence.

Additional Curricula.

"I am pleading for a more democratic system that will open up the opportunity of education to the men and women who have not had the usual preliminary school training," President Brandenburg said on this subject.

Additional curricula in the big fields of work should be set up in the colleges for this class of citizens, he believes, and these curricula should disregard the usual college restrictions as to amount of work done per semester and take into consideration more the ambitions, attitudes, abilities and desires of the individual taking the course.

In the closing part of his address, President Brandenburg made an appeal to the teachers to cultivate "a

Moral Education Is An Important Factor

Home, School and Church Should Cooperate in Helping Students to Better Life, Speakers Say.

"The work of the county superintendent is on the increase," declared Mrs. Allie S. Wilson, in her address to the high school section this afternoon on the subject of "Relation of County Superintendent to the Small High School," and recommended co-operation between them.

In regard to moral training in high school, J. C. Godbey, state high school inspector, showed the need for the training of conscience and pointed out the influence of three factors, the home, school, and church on high school pupils. He condemned the "getby" habit" and recommended that statistics be collected on the different vocations that students might be intelligently advised in choosing a vocation. He pointed out the importance of showing students the value of a course.

"Give pupils good, clean picture shows of the right type in school," he recommended.

Dr. P. P. Claxton in commenting on Mr. Godbey's address, declared that there is nothing more important that we can do than to stress the moral education.

Dr. Claxton spoke on some of the tendencies of education. He showed that in 1900 one-half million boys and girls were in high school, whereas, three million attend now. "Some places there are more than twenty times as many students than fifteen years ago."

"We are taking high school more seriously. Twenty-five years ago we had a course of study for all, now we are varying it. The educational standard has been raised. We must have a course of study as varied as the students themselves."

The speaker stressed the necessity of appealing to the students' interests, in order to interest him in learning and cited several examples where dull students once aroused have become outstanding successes.

"Education is an investment, not a cost," was his statement in regard to a common objection that education is costing too much.

"We need teachers in high school who will teach a higher outlook."

A BIGGER JOB THAN SHE ANTICIPATED.

"Dawn" was the first number on the program, a vocal solo by Miss Alyce Allen.

Old members welcomed back by Mrs. Mary Esther Murphy O'Banion.

"Berceuse" from Jocelyn was the piano number by Miss Dorothy Newsome. A second number by Miss Allen was "Russian Folk Song." The French Canadian" was the title of a play which was read by Miss LaVeta McClanahan. "Thais" (Massenet) was a violin solo by Miss Audrey Stiwalt.

In order that members might become better acquainted, each told something of the work that he had been doing, and work planned for the future.

Following the program, tea was served.

Many commercial banking customers have felt at some time or other that they need a "different" bank—a bank where they will feel at home the minute they enter the door—where no detail is too small to receive personal, interested attention—where the service is always prompt, courteous and efficient.

These ideals are ours. How well we live up to them is evidenced by our substantial progress and ever-widening circle of friends. A cordial welcome awaits you.

Quality Counts

Red Crown—A Premium Gasoline at a standard price—glides up the grade of popular favor with great ease.

Thousands of motorists have recognized the force of the "price per mile" argument and switched over to Red crown.

The price per gallon contention is weak-kneed—has no bearing.

The story is told better by what is built in the gasoline.

Of what significance is the question of a saving of a few cents on an investment of hundreds of dollars?

If you pay less for your gasoline than the price of Red Crown, you are getting less—and that is false economy raised to the nth power, no matter how it is disguised.

CITY TAX TO YIELD $34,104

TAXBOOKS NOW COMPLETED BY CITY CLERK.

VALUATION IS $5,328,825

Slightly Less Than Last Year. But Levy Is Slightly Higher—Due November 1.

Maryville city taxes will yield a total revenue of $34,104.49 if they are all collected, according to the city taxbooks, which have just been completed by Mrs. Walter Smith, city clerk.

The taxbooks were completed some time ago except for the merchants' taxes, which now have been entered. All taxes will become due on November 1, and if not paid by January 1, will become delinquent, after which they will draw interest at the rate of 1 per cent a month until paid.

The total valuation for the city is $5,328,825, on which the levy is 6.4 mills.

The taxes are distributed as follows:
General tax, $18,650.89.
Street lighting, $2,664.41.
Library, $2,664.41.
First water bond principal, $5,328.83.
First water bond interest, $1,065.77.
Second water bond principal, $2,644.41.
Second water bond interest, $1,065.77.
Total, $34,104.49.

The total valuation of the city's merchants is $213,445, and the total tax $1,366.05. The real estate valuation is $8,857,440 and the tax, $24,687.62. Personal property is valued at $819,280 and the tax will total $5,243.40. The banks have a valuation of $438,660 and will pay a tax of $2,807.32.

The valuation for this year is slightly lower than last year, when it was $5,389,795, but the total tax charged is greater because the levy last year was only 6.1 mills. The total of taxes charged last year was $32,877.75.

Submarine Fireman Tells of Disaster

Describes How Captain Called In Vain For Line—Says Liner Officer "Didn't Care for Boat."

Boston, Oct. 16.—"I don't give a d—— about the boat itself but I am sorry for the boys."

This is the statement made by Capt. John H. Diehl of the steamship, City of Rome, a short time after the coast liner had rammed and sank the submarine S-51 of Block Island, with a loss of thirty-three lives, according to testimony given today by Michael Lira, first-class fireman aboard the S-51 and one of the three survivors at a naval inquiry at Charleston Yards.

How the submarine captain called time and again through the darkness toward the lights of the City of Rome for a line, how the calls remained unanswered and no line came, how the submarine slowly sank beneath and his feet caught in the wireless antennae and now after a great struggle in the roaring sea he freed himself, was told by Lira.

Captain Diehl is at sea but will appear on his return to Boston next Tuesday.

Testimony that the rudder of the submarine was in a straight position and not pointed to a hard right as previously reported was given by James W. Freser, a diver of the U. S. S. Valkan.

Dewey K. Kile, a survivor of the S-51, was shaken by the crash. His efforts to close the water-tight compartments failed, Kile said, and clad only in his underclothing he made his way through the coning tower to the bridge and jumped into the water just as the S-51 disappeared beneath him.

The look-out on watch at the time of the crash was a man named Wiseman, Kile testified. He said he saw Wiseman swim in the water along side of him and calling for help.

At that time the City of Rome was only thirty feet from the scene of the disaster but Wiseman disappeared beneath the water before help could reach him, Kile said.

"Let us teach the kind of patriotism that will make the children that will maintain the country in the next generation honest in public offices and just in their regard for the other fellow," he said.

Right attitudes toward society and life were advocated as fundamentals to be instilled in school children by the speaker, and the "accidentalist" who is soured with life and against everything was bitterly condemned. "The Plastic Age," by Percy Marks, a book on contemporary college life was called "a great falsehood" by Mr. Brandenburg who accused the author of taking a few of the sordid spots and mistakes in college life and presenting them as a true cross section of colleges today.

400 PERSONS RAID VICTIMS

RUM ROW IS BUSY SCENE FOR U. S. FLEET

SEIZES 240 VESSELS

Only Few Boats and Men Are Lost in Dry Net Activities During Last Six Months, Report Says

Washington, Oct. 16—Four hundred persons and two hundred and forty seagoing vessels were captured in six months of naval warfare against "rum row," according to the official "casualty list" made public today.

With the loss of only a few vessels and several men, the government's dry navy confiscated probably a million dollars worth of whisky, and steamers, schooners and speed boats valued at as much more.

A big percentage of the ships captured by the coast guard have been turned back to their owners by the courts, however, and many of the prisoners are said to have been released because of the failure of these cases to "stand up." Attorney-General Sargent has ordered a number of appeals to the Supreme Court where the government obtained unfavorable decisions.

Bullodgs Here With Two Complete Teams

Coach McWilliams and His Kirksville Aggregation Expects Hard Fight Have Two Victories.

Two complete teams of Kirksville State Teachers College Bulldogs were brought to Maryville this morning by Coach H. L. ("Curly") McWilliams to engage the Maryville Bearcats in an annual combat, which will eliminate one or the other from the race for championship honors.

The Bulldogs come to Maryville flushed with two early season victories, one over the Ducks of Chillicothe Business College, who were defeated 7-0, and the other over Kemper Military Academy, over whom the Bulldogs triumphed by a 17-0 score.

Today's game is the first conference contest for the Kirksville crew, as it is for the Bearcats.

"We expect a hard game. We'll give all we've got," was the only pre game statement that Coach McWilliams would make.

McWilliams is a former University of Missouri star. He has been coach at the Kirksville college since 1914.

The visiting team is accompanied by Prof. George H. Jamison, who is faculty manager.

The roster of the Bulldog squad includes twenty-two men, headed by Captain Barker, who is playing his third year at right tackle and who is the chief luminary of the Northeast Missouri collegians. Captain Barker weighs 185 pounds.

Two other third year men are Vail, left guard, who tips the beam at 178 pounds, and Williamson, right half, who boasts of only 115 pounds, but who makes up for it by his speed.

Two-year veterans are Ransom, left half, 140 pounds; Streeter, fullback, 157; McKenna, also fullback; 178; Chevalier, left end, 158; Stroup, center, 180; and Reed, end 164.

First year men who are regulars are Coffey, center, 180 pounds; O. Craig, right guard, 172; Parsons, left tackle, 182; Payne, right end, 145; L. Craig, quarterback, 140.

The reserve material includes Simmons, halfback, 156 pounds; Garrett, end, 148; Eggert, quarterback, 150; Van Sickle, halfback, 158; Palmer, guard, 176; and Adams, tackle, 174.

Local Tourist Camp Becomes International Cross Roads

Mex. The Hawaiian party was going to New York City. People from Tampa, Fla., were going to Vancouver, B. C., so in matter of fact the tourist camp becomes an international cross roads.

Satisfied tourists are always good boosters and give a community much free publicity that can be secured in no other way. It was a noticeable fact that a number of people returned to our camp for a second visit on their way home, which is the best evidence obtainable of its quality. With wood, telephone, lights, shower baths, water, police protection, and plenty of shade, grass, tables and room, furnished for the nominal charge of 25 cents per party per night, with no time limit on the length of their stay, and with an excellent location close to town, it is not to be wondered that the Maryville tourist park is fast becoming a popular place with the ever increasing horde of motor tourists that throng the highways and by-ways of the nation during the summer months.

Next year should see the number who camp here more than doubled. All who spend the night with us must have groceries, gasoline and oil, while many will want tires, garage work, films, clothing, and many other things. All this means new money put into circulation in the community.

The bulk of the travel through Maryville is in a general north-eastern and southwestern direction, with a small amount of transcontinental east and west travel.

With the completion of No. 2 from St. Louis to Kansas City much east and west travel now passing through Iowa over the Lincoln Highway, Golden Rod route and other marked trails for want of better route, will come south through Missouri in order to stay on pavement as long as possible. Being in direct line with Kansas City and Omaha, Maryville will get a goodly portion of this travel. Particularly in wet weather will this route be preferable, as southern Iowa is without hard surfacing of any kind, and all roads there become practically impassable when it rains.

The designation of the north and south route through Maryville as one of the Nationally marked international routes, (Canada to New Orleans) will also be an important factor in increasing the motor tourist business.

The figures given here do not include at least as many more parties of tourists who stopped here during the day time, many of which went to the Chamber of Commerce office for highway information, and were given free Missouri road maps.

It is not unreasonable to expect that the 1926 tourist season will bring to this city not less than 1,000 parties who will spend the night at our park.

In addition to the tourists large numbers of picnic parties, local, and from nearby towns made use of the park.

Primary Teacher Must Work With Parents

Should Gain Confidence And Interest Of Pupils, Speaker Says At Sectional Meeting Of Convention.

"The beginning primary teacher should realize, most of all, that she must keep in close contact with the parents. She must gain the confidence and interest of her pupils and at the same time make the parents realize that they should be officially related to her," W. Scott Smith, superintendent of schools at Excelsior Springs, said in a departmental address yesterday afternoon in the women's gymnasium at the State Teachers College.

The gymnasium was half filled with primary and lower grade teachers.

Other talks were given by Dr. J. E. McKean, superintendent of the Fillmore public schools; and C. A. Phillips, professor of education at the University of Missouri. Dr. McKean spoke on "Standardized Spoken Word," and Dr. Phillips on, "The Present Situation in Elementary Education."

The community meeting that was to be held at the school house last Wednesday will be held Wednesday, Oct. 21.

Some new curtains have been installed in the school and it will now be easier for us to have a program.

Remember visitors and just criticism is always welcome.

Encourage the children to spend a few minutes on their lesson at home and their report cards will show the increase in efficiency.

Emery Griffith took part in a community program held at the Evans school last Friday evening.

Paul's Prescription for a Sick Church

Comment on the Uniform International Sunday School Lesson for October 18, 1925.

Read 1 Corinthians

Wm. Southern, Jr.

Some four or five years after Paul had organized the Christian church in Corinth he was living in Ephesus, not a difficult journey from Corinth. Messages and rumors began to reach him that the church in Corinth was in a bad way. There were reports of moral scandals, one man had married his step-mother, and there was a general looseness in matters of this kind. This was not the thing which disturbed Paul most. He learned that the church was divided into factions. One faction styled itself the Apollos-Christians, another faction the Cephas-Christians and still another the Paul-Christians while there was still another party which styled itself the Christ-party.

It was because of these reports that Paul wrote his Corinthian letters. The first letter that he wrote to the Corinthians was lost, as far as our records are concerned. Two letters we have in the New Testament which we know as First and Second Corinthians. This explains how these letters happened to be written and they contained so much of wisdom and practical theology that they were made a part of our New Testament.

If we took Paul's letters to the Corinthians as a set of rules to be interpreted literally and used today as written, we would have to make the women cover their heads while in church and keep silent. We would have a Bible direction written by St. Paul which very easily could be used to prove that it was a sin for a woman to bob her hair. We would not be discussing a plan to leave the word "obey" out of the marriage service for Paul insisted that women must subject themselves to their husbands. More than that Paul was evidently a sort of a woman hater, he did not believe in marriage. However, he recognized the value of marriage and permitted it in the new Christian church, although rather reluctantly.

Most of Paul's letter known as 1st Corinthians is devoted to the specific correction of specific and special sins into which the new church had fallen. He advised and almost threatened. The letter was probably given a place in the New Testament because of the thirteenth and fifteenth chapters which are on high levels of Christian philosophy and stand as fresh and applicable today as they did when written to the Corinthian church. It is from the thirteenth chapter that the text for this lesson is taken and in the thirteenth verse of this chapter is found this wonderful expression, a philosophy of life in itself:

"Now abideth faith, hope, love, these three; and the greatest of these is love."

In the Authorized version the word "charity" is used instead of love which appears in the revised version. The use of the word was correct when the authorized version was compiled, but the meaning has changed.

Men today scoff at Paul's idea that love is the greatest motif in the whole world. They call us dreamers and impractical thinkers when we say that love between the peoples of the nations of the world would banish war. They are cynical about love anyway and do not know what it means and can not understand why any man or woman can give up money and place and power and standing and of free choice to live in a small community where everybody knows and loves them. They can not understand that measure of success which does not count wealth.

Just now in our Protestant churches the same trouble is found which Paul found in the church at Corinth. The Christian churches of this day are divided into factional denominations and in almost every denomination or individual church are found factions.

THE GREATEST THING IN The World.

General Lesson Title—Paul Writes to the Corinthians.

Scripture Lesson—1 Cor. 12. 1 to 13. 13. (1 Cor. 13. 1-13 Printed.)

1. If I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, but have not love, I am become sounding brass, or a clanging cymbal.
2. And if I have the gift of prophecy, and know all mysteries and all knowledge; and if I have all faith, so as to remove mountains, but have not love, I am nothing.
3. And if I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and if I give my body to be burned, but have not love, it profiteth me nothing.
4. Love suffereth long, and is kind; love envieth not; love vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up;
5. Doth not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not its own, is not provoked, taketh not account of evil;
6. Rejoiceth not in unrighteousness, but rejoiceth with the truth;
7. Beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things.
8. Love never faileth: but whether there be prophecies, they shall be done away; whether there be tongues, they shall cease; whether there be knowledge, it shall be done away.
9. For we know in part, and we prophesy in part:
10. But when that which is perfect is come, that which is in part shall be done away.
11. When I was a child, I spake as a child, I felt as a child, I thought as a child; now that I am become a man, I have put away childish things.
12. For now we see in a mirror darkly; but then face to face; now I know in part; but then shall I know fully even as also I was fully known.
13. But now abideth faith, hope, love, these three; and the greatest of these is love.

Golden Text—Now abideth faith, hope, love, these three; and the greatest of these is love.—1 Cor. 13. 13.

We have the same thing in our politics. There are Bryan-Democrats and Wilson-Democrats and Roosevelt-Republicans and McKinley-Republicans and La Follette-Republicans. There are in our country German-Americans and Irish-Americans, and many other hyphenated Americans. We have Methodist-Christians and Presbyterian Christians and Episcopal-Christians and Baptist Christians and Christian-Christians to the number of nearly 200 different brands of hyphenated Christians. Most of us are willing to agree that there is some good about the other denominations but insist our own denomination is the only simon pure, blown-in-the-bottle brand now on earth.

Paul's prescription for the sick church at Corinth was love. I do not know just how to define the kind of love he meant, but he defined it when he said "If I speak with the tongues of men and angels, but have not love, I am become sounding brass or a clanging cymbal."

Did you ever hear an eloquent speaker from whose tongue dropped the most beautiful words, conveying the most wonderful ideals and yet have no confidence in that speaker? I think Paul meant that no matter how eloquent a man may be, no matter how great a mind he might possess if he was not sincere, if he himself did not believe what he preached he was of no more effect than the blaring of a wind instrument. You have all known great men who were great only because they were sincere. I have heard men of small education and little oratory and poor grammar sway audiences and bring home wonderful truths simply because they were sincere and believed with their whole heart in what they were preaching.

I have no use for the man who prays in a loud voice with tears running down his cheeks and his voice sepulchral and pious who goes out the next day and swindles his neighbor in a horse trade or forecloses a mortgage on a widow's home and throws her helpless into poverty simply to make money.

Perhaps these two homely illustrations will give an idea of what Paul meant by love. I have attempted to give a practical illustration in familiar terms.

Love will cure all our political and social and religious ills.

Love means treating the other fellow as you would have him treat you.

Love will cure our sick churches.

Mail Carrier's Auto and Another Collide

Cars of Denver Florea and Mr. Alexander of Pickering Are Put Out Of Commission.

A head-on automobile collision took place in Pickering Saturday morning when Denver Florea, mail carrier, and Mr. Alexander of Pickering met at a corner. Alexander's windshield was covered with frost and he did not see Florea's car until it was too late to avoid the crash.

No one was hurt, but both cars were put out of commission, and Mr. Florea, with his two daughters, boarded the morning train for St. Joseph, where they had started. His son, Donnel, remained with the car and had it repaired but had further bad luck when the gasoline was stolen from the tank of the car Saturday night.

With all the driving that the mail carrier has done, this was his first automobile accident.

Too Much Efficiency

By E. J. Rath

BEGIN HERE TODAY.

JOHN W. BROOKE, hardware magnate, has arranged with Economy and Efficiency Corporation, Limited, to manage his household. Brooke, a widower, has left town without informing his three children of the new arrangement.

H. HEDGE, efficiency engineer, assigned to the job, has arrived at the Brooke mansion and read the document, which gives him unlimited control in managing all affairs of the house, to the astonishment of the three heirs-to-be. He now produces a second, less official communication, and proceeds to read.

NOW GO ON WIT HTHE STORY.

"My Dear Children:

"I shall be away from home until the evening of February 19. I am in perfect health. My trip is chiefly of a business nature. In order to make all proper provision for your care and comfort, I am placing a personal representative in charge of my household, a man in whom I have complete confidence. My personal attorneys are charged to communicate with me in case of emergency, but under no other circumstances. It will be useless for you to inquire my whereabouts from them. I feel that this short separation will be of benefit to all of us, and I shall look forward to our reunion with affectionate anticipations.

"For the time being I am your father."

"In the meanwhile Mr. Hedge will be in full and absolute charge, with the authority that I have conferred upon him in another document. He is a man of excellent character, thoroughly recommended by his employers, and, I am satisfactorily assured, a gentleman. He will reside with you, and will have full financial responsibility in all household and family matters.

"It is needless for me to say that you will co-operate with him in every way; I know that you will. Treat him as you would me.

"And now, my children, I bid you, for a short time, an affectionate goodby.

"Your loving father,

"JOHN W. BROOKE."

"That document you may keep," said Mr. Hedge, as he passed the letter to Constance Brooke. The one with the red seal he replaced in his pocket.

Still the three Brooke children spoke no word. Speech was not theirs for the moment; rather, it was theirs to gaze in mute bewilderment at the bearer of the documents.

They saw a person who was somewhat above medium height and of slender frame. The lines of his head were angular, an effect heightened by his almost black hair and the stiff, uncompromising manner in which it was brushed straight back past his ears. His eyes were dark and disconcertingly steady. His nose was long, but straight in the bridge and not badly molded. His lips closed firmly but not harshly. There was a faint cleft in his chin. He was dressed quietly, but obviously well. As to his age, it was probably twenty-eight or nine.

Mr. Hedge bore the scrutiny with composure, as though it were something he had quite anticipated. He measured glances with William Brooke without the quiver of an eyelid, while he regarded Constance as impersonally as though she were an inanimate fixture in the library.

It was Alice who spoke first.

"Where is my father?" she demanded, in a frightened voice. "I—I don't understand. Where is dad?"

"I am unable to answer," replied Mr. Hedge easily. "I do not know. It is not my business to know. He is, however, as he explains in his letter, quite well and he will return to you on the day mentioned."

"February 19!" gasped Constance, glancing at the letter. "And—and this is December! You mean to say we will not see our father in all that time?"

"Evidently not, unless he should change his plans."

"But what will we do?"

"Continue to reside in your home under my protection," observed Mr. Hedge, with a casual glance that embraced the principal features of the apartment.

The scion of the Brooke family, after gulping twice, found his voice.

"What sort of a joke is all this?" he demanded.

"No joke. Business," said Mr. Hedge tersely.

"Well, I propose to find out."

"Very well. Too late this evening, however. Tomorrow you may telephone to the offices of our corporation and obtain a verification."

"But what's the idea of it all? If the old man wants to go away, well and good. But why can't we run things? Where do you come in?"

Mr. Hedge smiled faintly, a dignified yet not unpleasant proceeding.

"I came in by order of your father," he answered. "In fact, for the time being, I am your father."

"Good Lord!" The exclamation came from the lips of Billy Brooke. He surveyed the stranger from head to heels with plain intent to express contempt. Why, he was bigger himself!

"I prefer, however, to be called Mr. Hedge. And the reason that you cannot run things is that I am going to run them."

There was a snap in his voice that made the Brooks children wince.

"And now," he added, in a more comfortable tone, "I believe it is time for dinner. Let us go in."

Constance hesitated, which meant that her brother and sister did likewise. It was a characteristic development of every crisis in the Brooke family. They would have scorned to acknowledge it, but the older brother and the younger sister had unconsciously fallen into the habit of waiting to see what Constance would do. Mr. Hedge sensed the situation. He had eyes only for the central figure of the trio.

She met his glance quite steadily, with a slight narrowing of her eyes, as though making a swift mental calculation. Her poise had returned to her; even at the first she had not been frightened, although undeniably startled.

Constance was not so pretty as her fifteen-year-old sister; that would have been difficult, for Alice was pretty beyond all reason. None the less, the young chatelaine of the Brooke mansion presented to the world a countenance of which only the most exacting could make complaint. It was the kind that photographs with mysterious effect, because it held something more than mere comeliness, something elusive yet discernible, something that, for want of a more successful description, is usually called character.

John W. Brooke always insisted that Constance was her mother, over again. Yet sometimes he saw himself in the straightforward glance of her gray eyes, and others saw it, too. Mr. Hedge did not see it, because he had never beheld John W. Brooke. Nevertheless he saw enough to convince him that he had made no mistake in addressing himself chiefly to the young woman who stood before him.

"Certainly; we will dine," said Constance abruptly.

She led the way from the library, down the broad hall and into a spacious room that lay on the opposite side of the house. Alice followed her closely, then Billy. Mr. Hedge brought up in the rear, making swift note of his surroundings, and occasionally frowning slightly.

The dining-room in the Brooke mansion was all that a Fifth Avenue dining-room should be. It was almost a banquet hall. Mr. Brooke had paneled it in a walnut, because he could easily afford to; he had placed no check upon his architect, either in this or any other apartment under his roof.

The family table, always employed when there were no guests, seemed absurdly small in the great room. It was not placed in the center, but drawn close to an open fire place, wherein a few logs of high-priced driftwood were burning with strange flames of green and blue and yellow.

It was quite a long walk to the table, and the procession moved in single file, Mr. Hedge's active glance flitting from side to side. Even Horace, the butler, from his place behind Constance's chair, could discern that the stranger was completely at ease. He neither hurried nor loitered; he did not carry his hands in his pockets, nor rub his nose furtively, nor straighten his tie. He moved as nonchalantly toward the table as John W. Brooke himself.

"My father's chair," said Constance with a brief gesture.

Mr. Hedge seated himself in it.

"You may serve dinner, Horace," murmured Constance.

"Yes, Miss Brooke," and Horace, wrenching his glance from the face of the stranger disappeared on his errand.

There was a half minute of silence, broken only by an embarrassed cough from Billy. Then Mr. Hedge spoke.

"Now that we've all plunged in, the water isn't so cold, after all, is it?"

The three Brookes looked at him sharply and with obviously surprised faces. Constance and her brother exchanged fleeting glances. Alice pursed her lips. The observation had sounded rather human, quite different from the Hedge of the library. He was smiling, too.

"You see," he continued easily, "the first shock was not in the fact that I arrived on the scene, but in the fact that your father didn't."

Constance was not wholly sure of this.

"I can readily understand your surprise," said Mr. Hedge. "It is entirely natural. We are all more or less creatures of surprise. But surprises are not necessarily unpleasant or attended by any unfortunate consequences."

Constance made note of the fact that the stranger thought well of himself.

"I'm simply your father's agent for a short time. I've no doubt in the world that you will all take a keen interest in the experiment, as soon as the nature of it is clear to you."

In the Diplomatic News

After "careful consideration," no action was taken by U. S. immigration authorities on charges that beautiful Gloria Faure traveled from El Paso to New York as "maid" in the private car of Senor Alberto J. Pani, Mexico's minister of finance. Senorita Faure and Pani are shown above. The girl vanished from New York when the charges became public. She is an actress, a former Mexican revolutionist and a grand-daughter of Francois Faure, one-time president of France.

Pickering Man Loses His Auto—Almost

(Hopkins Journal)

Lawrence Wiley the Standard Oil representative of Hopkins, has always stood high in this community as a man of morals but he is now facing an ugly charge, that of being "drunk" on gasoline but we don't believe it. However, Fred Yeomans and others feel they have good proof. It seems Lawrence drove his Dodge touring car to Pickering the other day, parking it there while he made some collections and when ready to go to the country on a similar errand, jumped into what he supposed was his car but in fact it was a car belonging to Vern Fakes. Vern happened to see the Hopkins oil man just as he was starting away and yelled vigorously and waved his arms at him, but Lawrence thinking he was just "high balling him," drove away not discovering his mistake until he went to get some papers out of the car and of course found them missing. He hurried back to Pickering and squared things by using some of John D's kale in buying the cigars.

J. D. McGinness and family moved last week from their farm, northeast of town, to their place in town in order that they may be convenient to High School.

Mr. McGinness has employed Arlie Shelman of near Hopkins to gather his corn crop and look after the stock on the farm.

Adelbert McMillen, Librarian at Washington University at St. Louis, visited at the home of his father, C. G. McMcMillan, the first of the week. He left Tuesday for Sioux City, Ia., where he goes to attend a regional meeting of librarians of six mid-west states.

Mrs. D. S. Robinson and Mrs. C. E. Hull went to Springfield, Mo., on Monday to attend the state convention of the order of Eastern Star as delegates from the lodge at this place. Mrs. Robinson will visit relatives at Nevada, Mo., before her return home.

Mr. and Mrs. Basil Wiley left Tuesday for Trenton, Mo., where they will visit a few days before going to Detroit, Mich., where they expect to make their home. They were accompanied by Mrs. Scott Buchanan, mother of Mrs. Wiley, who has been making her home with them and who will accompany them to Detroit.

Mrs. Albert H. Leonard left for her home in St. Louis on Tuesday, after a ten day visit at the home of her parents, Dr. and Mrs. E. L. Crowson.

Mrs. Ethel Swinford left Monday for Denver, Colo., where she may spend the winter if she finds a satisfactory place. Her place in the Alexander Grocery is being filled by J. A. Mann.

J. P. Carter returned the first of the week from Rochester, Minn., where he went a short time since for medical examination.

Mrs. Laura Watson went to Rochester, Minn., this week to be with her daughter, Mrs. Ross Lincoln, while her grandson, Wilbur Lincoln, is taking treatment at the Mayo Hospital.

Sledo Proctor was considerably bruised one day last week by falling to the bottom of a trench about 17 feet in depth, while working on the concrete bridge project on the State Highway at Canal Branch. He is now able to be about again, but still walks with a cane.

Christian Church.

Next Sunday morning the sermon subject will be "The Fullfilling of the Law." We were delighted with fine morning congregation last Sunday. Not so many at night, but a fair audience. Come next Sunday, both morning and night. The night subject will be a discussion of the National Convention of Churches of Christ at Oklahoma City, as reported in the religious press.

There was one addition to the church last Sunday by statement, Miss Penniston, who is teaching in Pickering. Also one addition a week ago, Viola Robinson, who came by primary obedience, and who was baptized the following Thursday night.

We are glad to announce that Bro. J. T. Alsup of Maryville has been engaged to hold a revival meeting for us in December. We look forward to a successful campaign.

Is Tenth Missourian in President's Cabinet

Four Previous Members—Francis, Nagel, Houston and Alexander—Are Still Alive.

St. Louis, Oct. 15.—The naming of Dwight F. Davis of St. Louis as secretary of war recalls the fact that he is the tenth Missourian to hold a cabinet position since the first election of Abraham Lincoln in 1860. It also recalls that of this number only four are alive today. They are David R. Francis, Charles Nagel, David F. Houston and J. W. Alexander.

The ten Missourians mentioned and the presidents under whom they served are:

Winter is coming. Don't buy a car that's hard to start unless you live on top of a hill.

Don't be impolite, but wait for some people to finish what they are saying and you will die of old age.

The haunted house

Tales about it were as numerous as its dark, broken windows. Oaks shadowed it thickly; winds sucked through its halls. The shutters sagged and were ivy-eaten—the windows giving in to an emptiness at once foreboding, dreadful.

Excitement ran agog when the place was bought. School children huddled to watch the rooms renovated. A sign swung out: "Stop here for tea." Lights sprang up. It became a frequent pleasure to drop in of evenings. In time, the towns-people loved the place. The inviting sign, the cleanliness, the light banished fear.

Many a product you didn't know and might not have trusted, has become intimate to you through the clearness of advertising. Family standbys in your medicine chest, baking powders, extracts—products that might endanger if less than pure—you know to be pure because widely advertised. You are sure of their quality wherever you buy. You feel safe in using them—in using any product that invites, through advertising, the test that proves its worth. Your one-time fear is now a willing confidence.

Answers Charges of Chinese Ministry

Orientals Declare Foreigners' Consular Courts In China Show Favoritism To Own Nations.

By CHARLES P. STEWART
NEA Service Writer.

Washington—Diplomacy in Washington is greatly shocked at the Chinese ministry of justice's charge that the foreigners' consular courts in China show favoritism toward their own nationals when called on to try them for offenses against natives.

All the same, everybody who ever had any experience in the far east knows that these courts' decisions almost always are on the side of the foreigners and against the natives.

It's hardly to be expected of human nature that the situation should be otherwise.

An American, for instance, is arraigned in the American consular court say at Shanghai, on charges which Chinese accusers, or perhaps European residents of the foreign settlement, are pressing against him.

The judge may well feel some little prejudice in favor of his own countryman without being the least bit crooked, and still more so the jury. The extraterritorial system, in its nature, obviously lends itself to injustice.

In my own time in China I recall the case of one little occidental country which maintained a consul at Shanghai for the benefit of just a single one of its citizens. The consul's official income naturally was very small but his resident fellow countryman brought it up to a handsome figure out of his own pocket.

This individual ran a gambling house in the international settlement. The foreign authorities who governed the settlement didn't like it and had their police arrest the gambling house proprietor repeatedly.

While the international police could arrest him, however, they had to turn him over to his own consul for trial. One guess is sufficient to tell anybody what invariably happened.

Inspection of Rural Routes This Week

Names Of Patrons Must Be On Every Mail Box Along Route— Absence Of Them Causes Trouble.

This is the month for the inspection of the rural routes and all the postmasters are to insist that each rural route patron comply with the post office laws and regulations requiring that the name of the box owner be on the side of the mail box approached by the carrier. The absence of the names has caused special trouble to sub-carriers in delivering mail. The inspectors' tour is to be this month and he will insist that the law be complied with in this respect.

Along with the complaint that the wet weather has caused the corn to rot in the fields comes the complaint that bad roads delay mail.

J. F. Hull, postmaster, received this week from Fourth Assistant Postmaster General H. H. Billany the following:

"It has come to the attention of the department that there are many rural routes throughout the country on which there is a short stretch of bad road which makes it impossible for the rural carrier to use a motor conveyance during all or the greater part of the year. If this short stretch of road were improved or eliminated, it would be possible for the rural carrier to use a motor conveyance for a much greater period and thereby render better service to the rural public in expediting the delivery of mail over the entire route.

"Postmasters are urged to take up with local road officials, and others responsible the matter of improving bad stretches of road, particularly short stretches, the improvement of which would have the effect of permitting carriers to use motor conveyances for a greater part of the year.

"Carriers will bring such bad stretches to attention of postmasters.

"The department will also be glad to help in obtaining the improvement of roads where postmasters and rural carriers, after proper endeavor, are unsuccessful.

"The department will further consider the amendment of a route to avoid a short stretch of bad road where only a few families are incommoded and where the elimination o fthe short stretch of bad road would make it possible for the carrier to use a motor conveyance for a longer period during the year and thus permit of an earlier delivery of the mail to his patrons. Recommendations for such changes will be submitted to the Fourth Assistant Postmaster General, Division of Rural Mails."

Closing Grain Review.

Chicago, Oct. 16.—Strengths in wheat acted as a chronic for the entire grain list in today's session on the Board of Trade. The leading cereal finished higher. Coarse grains although not showing much strength were saved from sharp losses.

Late pressure by disappointed longs took the edge off wheat's gain for the day.

Liberal movement of new grain coupled with slow demand threatened to weaken corn's undertone. Strengths in wheat brought in some short covering and a slight fractional advance.

Oats held relatively firm on a dull and featurless market.

There was less pressure on provisions. Early drops on cash house selling held to the last.

SCHOOL NEEDS HOME THINGS

SAYS STUDENTS SHOULD BE TAUGHT APPRECIATION.

ART INFLUENCE FELT

Pictures, Poetry And Songs Help, Speaker Says At Convention Session—Must Aid Farm Life.

"I believe there is a place in the school for teaching and appreciation of the home. This can be done through homelike appearance and atmosphere of the schoolroom itself and the attitude of the teacher. The schoolroom may always be neat and clean."

This is the declaration of Miss Cassie Burke, the State Supervisor of Rural Schools of Missouri, in her address yesterday afternoon, in the college auditorium, at a sectional meeting of interest to rural school teachers. Miss Burke's subject was "Teaching Appreciation In The Elementary School."

Pictures, curtains, flowers and many other little touches of beauty and comfort may be added, which are well worth the money and effort expanded upon them. The teacher who has a beautiful schoolroom and is herself attractive and sympathetic will have few problems in discipline."

"An appreciation of home may be encouraged through the study of such poems and songs as "Home Sweet Home," "An Order For A Picture," "Somebody's Mother," "Cotter's Saturday Night," "A Heap of Living," "Only One Mother,' "Little Grey Home In The West," "America For Me."

"By such pictures as Whittier's "Mother," Rayburn's "Mother and Daughter," and the "Madonna" pictures; by many stories such as the Marches in "Little Women." The theme being throughout: "Be it ever so humble and so poor, there's no place like home." Next I should urge the teaching of an appreciation of people—people whom we meet or see every day, for the use of the words of Edgar A. Guest:

"When you get to know a fellow,
Know his joys and know his cares.
When you come to understand him,
And the burdens that he bears—
When you have learned the fight he's making
And the troubles in his way,
Then you find that he is different—
Than you thot him yesterday.
You find his thoughts are trivial,
And there's not so much to blame;
In the brother that you jeered at—
When you only knew his name."

Should Appreciate Folks.

"I would teach an appreciation of our countrymen in various stations of life, whom we seldom see if ever; and of our foreign brothers across the ocean whom we probably expect to never see," the speaker said. "When we have taught an understanding of people, who they are, what they are, what they do, and why they do it, world peace will be assured. You have not taught citizenship until you have taught the occupations and conditions of American people of every station of life and of every color. You have not taught geography until you have studied the people of a country—and you have not taught the people of a country until you have taught their literature, music and painting."

Miss Burke played a number of records on the Victrola to demonstrate the things which she had pointed out to promote emotional feeling and regard for the things of life, on the part of the child life. One of the records played was Brahms, "Hungarian Dance," to demonstrate the intermingling of the brave, almost arrogant passages with the merry and high spirited, the almost plaintive strain and again the stern independence.

"I should emphasize that within each individual there comes at some time a desire for the expression of some lofty ideal or thought." Miss Burke stated. "Most people who have been able to give expression, do so through word pictures (poem or story) painted pictures (drawing or sculpture) and through music. The painted pictures we may set before us and see it as a whole in its entire beauty. The poem we read thought by thought and may have the entire selection before our eyes at once. While music, we hear one melody or strain, then it must give place to another and we have the first only in memory, it is never possible to enjoy a musical selection as a whole in the sense as one does a picture.

Need Art Appreciation.

"Finally I should try to teach an appreciation of each of the three, poetry, pictures and music.

"There comes the question, in our over-crowded rural schools, what shall I teach, when shall I teach and how shall I teach?

"Of poems teaching those that interest, those based upon the actual experience of the child or upon an experience that can be imagined by the child; those of unusual beauty or power of expression; those that express a noble ideal or lesson. Of pictures show those that will interest, those which tell a story, those which describe types of living or periods of history. You are fortunate if you have a talking machine in your school, if not try to persuade your School Board to buy you one. Teach children to sing or listen to records of folk songs and typical national songs. Teach children the listening appreciation of music. Teach children to recognize kinds of music, the march, hymn, lullaby, the dance. Teach the instrument, the names, sound form and use of solo instruments and the instruments in orchestra and band."

Roach Urges Co-Operation.

Fred Roach, county superintendent of schools of Buchanan County, speaking on the subject of "Getting The Most Out Of A County Superintendents Visit," stressed the importance of a county superintendent and the teacher.

"A county superintendent deserves the co-operation, effort and interest of the teacher and the teacher most certain to succeed is devoted to the cause of education and to improvement."

The speaker told of various experiences of visits to rural schools in his home county and the attitude of the teachers in their work. "The teacher who always is willing to offer an alibi for some thought or shortcoming of her school is evident of one least interested in the educational program and the necessity of putting it over.

"It is well for the teacher," Mr. Roach said, "to offer lesson plans for the year or in certain phases of work for the inspection of the county superintendent and for such suggestions that he may want to make."

Mr. Roach declared the office of county superintendent as a large field for observation and thought that his services to the teacher should be most valuable and the teacher should look forward to the visit of the county superintendent for the utmost of good.

Charles A. Lee, state superintendent of schools of Missouri, speaking on "Rural Education" briefly pointed out the need of improved rural school life and emphasized, the rural school and the problem of agriculture as going hand in hand, that one could not be settled without the improvement of the other.

Rural School Gaining.

Mr. Lee declared that there should be a cut in school recitation time if it will adequately serve the advancement of studying conditions.

"The rural school is on the up grade and in the next few years Missourians will be astonished at the rapid transformation of the rural school. Years will tell, the present is answered by the greatest business of mankind—the school," Mr. Lee said.

SAYS 1926 TO BE EVENTFUL

CRYSTAL GAZER MAKES PREDICTIONS FOR NEXT YEAR

LINER IN DISASTER

American Financier to Die, According to Professor Raymond, Widely-Known French Scientist

Paris, Oct. 16—The year 1926 will be an eventful one if one can believe the annual forecast of Professor Raymond, widely-known French crystal gazer, who, it is claimed, accurately predicted the World War and America's entrance into it, the Lusitania disaster and the death of President Wilson.

Among the professor's predictions for 1926 are:

A great disaster to a trans-Atlantic liner on the high seas bound for the United States, the death of an American financier, great American interest in European affairs because of the personal sympathy of President Coolidge, American bankers and the southern and eastern states, France, United States, Great Britain and Germany coming to an agreement, which will stabilize the franc.

The professor also predicts that sugar, platinum, copper and steel will have a bullish year.

England has a bad twelve months ahead, the professor predicts. He claims revolutions will break out in three of her dominions and armies will have to be mobilized to quell them.

Within three years regular air mail service will be established between France and the United States.

"Romola" Scene Laid in Original City

Famous Picture To Be Shown At College Auditorium Tomorrow Afternoon—Lillian Gish Is Star.

Every student of literature has read "Romola," that fascinating story of love and intrigue which George Eliot wrote a half century ago. Now "Romola" has emerged from the printed page, and has come to life in Florence, Italy, the ancient city in which the story is laid.

Lillian Gish and her company went to Italy in 1924 to make a film version of this famous novel and the result may be seen at the College auditorium Saturday evening of this week and Monday evening of next week. A special matinee will be given at 2 o'clock Saturday for the visiting teachers to enable them to see this picture before the afternoon Burlington South.

"Romola" is now showing for the first time at the Royal Theatre in Kansas City and in many of the larger cities. It is enjoying record-breaking runs in New York, Los Angeles, Chicago and other cities.

The Greatest Romance Of All!

the film spectacle that the World is talking about

LOVE betrayed. Ambition that led to tragedy. The courage of a woman's soul at war with the odds of fate . . . an impressive spectacle of romance, piracy, treachery and revolution! Glamorous with the intrigues of a great age of romance. Lillian Gish in a role of triumph, even greater than "The White Sister."

CAPACITY HOUSES AT

$2.20 in New York
$1.50 in Los Angeles
$1.65 in Philadelphia

The New York run was originally booked for eight weeks at the George M. Cohan Theatre, but its success was so great that the run was extended indefinitely. It bids fair to beat the record of "The White Sister."

Likewise at Sid Grauman's Egyptian in Los Angeles and at the Aldine in Philadelphia, it is proving the biggest drawing card of Lillian Gish's career. At the Los Angeles opening, when $5.50 rates were charged, the premiere was acclaimed by all of the newspapers as the most brilliant in the history of the motion picture capitol. You will find in the exploitation section just how the picture was presented in these three cities; three campaigns full of ideas that each exhibitor can adapt to his own needs.

6 Months in Making in Florence, Italy

And all of that time thousands of columns were printed about it, so that it goes to the exhibitor when he shows it backed up by tremendous international publicity, as well as a great national advertising campaign. All critics agree that for sheer beauty "Romola" excels anything ever seen upon the screen. Lillian Gish, who is now universally recognized as the greatest genius of acting world, again worked under the direction of Henry King, who made "The White Sister" and "Tol-able David." And again she has as her leading man the magnetic Ronald Colman.
